

This week sees our students spend just the four days in school with Friday being an in-service day for staff.

With Friday being an in-service day for staff, this is the ideal opportunity for our S3 students to complete some work on their Google Classrooms that may have been missed or to consolidate their learning in one or two subject areas with a bit of revision.

If you have not yet been able to access Google Classrooms with your child, then please do take the chance to have a look at the work being provided across the school, it's a great platform and quite straightforward to use.

As a school, we are keen to develop how we communicate with parents and partners and to that end we have set up a Facebook page to complement our Twitter page. You can find us on Facebook via the following link and the page will give a wee insight into daily life at Lornshill Academy:

Back in the physical school building, late coming is becoming a bit of an issue within our S3 group. I have started to make direct contact with parents of students who are repeatedly late at either the start of the day or after lunchtime. It is absolutely vital that all students attend on time to ensure they can access full lessons but also to minimise disruptions to our classes and other students. Your ongoing support to help improve things in relation to this is much appreciated.

I have previously spoken about the importance of our school values and particularly the value of respect. I am delighted to say that nearly all of our students act with respect and compassion on nearly all occasions. As the senior students within our Hub area at social times, I have been very happy with how our S3s have been leading by example in showcasing the value of respect in day-to-day life.

As always, should you have any queries please do not hesitate to get in touch.
